HOW WISCONSIN RANKS IN MATH – DAVE BASKERVILLE

Dave Baskerville spend 40 years working in international business then moved back to the Madison area to consult for US companies. His focus is on stretch targets and how Wisconsin improves its rankings in math, reading and science. Dave talked about Wisconsin's scorecard and current rankings within the US as 8th in math, 15th in Science and 8th in reading. He also shared the US rankings in the World as 36th in math, 27th in science and 21st in reading. The question asked is, Can stretch targets help us improve our global competitiveness and elevate our ability to attract talent to Wisconsin? Some of the stretch targets Dave shared are: By 2037 for Wisconsin to rank better than Minnesota for per capita income. By 2037 for the US to rank in the top 10 in math, science and reading for 8th grade students. Some countries that stand out above us are Finland, Japan, Canada and Singapore. A comment shared regarding achievement scores differ by the characteristics in the district: ethnicity and social economics. It is difficult to compare apples to apples.
